MILK PRODUCERS' CONVENTION TO DISCUSS COOPERATIVE MEASURES

Leading officers of the National Milk Producers' Association. Above, President John D. Miller of Susquehanna, Pa., left, and Richard Patton, who will be one of the speakers. Center, Chas. W. Holman, Wash., D. C., secretary of the milk producers. Below, D. G. Harry, director of the producers association, left, and Frank P. Willets, treasurer of the National Milk Producers' Association.

Pittsburgh.—One thousand leaders of co-operative milk producers' associations will come to Pittsburgh for the seventh annual meeting of the National Milk Producers' Association, Nov. 3 and 4. They will discuss chiefly how to produce economically and distribute efficiently high quality milk supply to the cities of America. They will also take up such questions as the national distribution through co-operative associations of milk, in addition to the delegates a large number of agricultural editors and officials of federal and state extension services will attend.

We have selected a battery of speakers nationally known for their knowledge of these problems," said Secretary Charles W. Holman of Washington, D. C., who is here making arrangements for the convention. "These men will give the results of mature experience. The program covers a range of topics such as the control of motor trucking of milk, the use of statistics by co-operative associations in selling dairy products, maintaining an efficient staff of employees, how to operate pooling associations and the development of co-operative dairy marketing."

The national federation is said to be the outstanding national organization among co-operatives in this country and the oldest. It extends from coast to coast and represents 250,000 organized milk producers who sell their products through 17 regional co-operative associations.

Through co-operatives marketing, established regionally, and through national protective organizations, represented by the federation, they have taken steps to aid the dairy farmers.

The National Milk Producers' Association took the initiative in securing the passage of the Capper-Volstead law authorizing farmers' co-operative associations to form and do business in interstate commerce, according to Holman.

The assessor's report is expected to be in the printer's hands in a few days.

FRANCE WELCOMES U. S. BUT PLASTERS LIMIT ON INQUIRY

NOTE TO LONDON

Poincare Ready to Soften Restrictions Formerly Set, England Believes.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Paris.—France accepts with cordiality the contemplated collaboration of the United States in a conference of experts to study Germany's capacity to pay reparations.

She demands, however, that it should be clearly understood that the proposed inquiry should bear solely on the "present" capacity of Germany and that it should respect all the rights held by the reparations commission under the treaty of Versailles.

This is the substance, it was learned today, of the reply which France has made to the British note of Oct. 21, asking for the return of Belgium and Great Britain in a collective invitation to the United States to be represented at the proposed conference.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Washington.—In the absence of a definite understanding of the allied reparations formula, being worked out between London and Paris, American officials still are unable to determine whether the invitation for American participation in an expert investigation will be found acceptable.

There are further official views, the United States is continuing the role of interested observer, and is maintaining hope that the restrictions proposed by France may not in the end prove of such a character as to render American aid in the inquiry futile.

SENATOR, BACK IN U. S., GIVES FIRST HAND WARNING

AMERICA MUST AID OR SEE HELL, LET LOOSE, ASSAULTION.
RIOTING COMMON
Desperate, Underfed People Ready to Overthrow Law; Quick Rescue Urged.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Portland, Me.—Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, returning today on the United States liner George Washington, after three months in Europe, told newspaper men that what he had seen on that trip was "more determined than ever to devote whatever power I possess to bringing our government back to the people."

He said he was prepared to spend the balance of his life combating with renewed energy "the forces that are tending to undermine and destroy in the United States the American tradition of government."

He declined to comment on the appointment of former Senator Lodge as ambassador to Great Britain, but said he would say on that subject, "I don't want to talk about it."

In making an appeal for American aid for the people of Germany, Senator La Follette said: "Delay means the possible overthrow of governments, disorganizing chaos, civil war and hell let loose in Europe."

"I feel bound," he said in a prepared statement, "to avail myself of this first opportunity upon my return to the United States to tell the women of our country to help the unfortunate people of Germany. Wholly aside from the issues involved in the war, common humanity calls upon the American people to aid the German people in their dire need and to aid them now."

The senator said the German people had been in dire need for several years and were suffering for want of food, fuel and clothing.

The situation is desperate in the large cities where food riots are common," he continued. "The crisis which is at hand involves possibilities not only to the German people, but to the world. Hunger is the first brand of revolution. There is no time for prolonged debate. We must act now."

He urged the American people to organize for action at once, adding: "Every American citizen who believes in the fundamental principles of democracy and of government by the people should be interested in saving the German republic. If the democracy which Germany has established with its enlightened constitution falls, the inevitable allies are communism or monarchy."

Democracy Crushed
"Not only in Germany, but in many other European countries that democracy are being crushed or rent asunder by dictatorships of various forms. When I think of the world the world the greatest contribution that America can make to Europe and to civilization is to develop and perfect her own democracy. It is during the darkest days that are ahead we may stand as a beacon lighting the way to all people."

MARGARINE NOT A "SUBSTITUTE" SAY MANUFACTURERS

Is a Fine, Modern Food

Margarine is made and sold in an honest, straightforward fashion in accordance with the best ideals of modern American food production and marketing. It reaches the consumer in a carton that is plainly stamped "margarine," and the customer knows exactly what she is buying. In fact the high character of margarine as a pure, wholesome food is so pronounced that the producers are proud to be identified with their product.

Conscious of the sound ethical basis upon which the industry is operating, the margarine manufacturer naturally resents the constant allusion to his product as a "substitute," or an "equivalent." The use of the word "butterine" is to be deplored, as it gives the impression that margarine is a second-rate product, a poor imitation of another and similar product. The food writers are as much to blame in this respect as anybody. Most of their definitions start, "Margarine is a substitute," and even some dictionaries follow suit.

Margarine today is a prepared spread, but is no more artificial than any other food that is prepared by alternate heating, blending and chilling. The flavor of margarine pleases the taste of a great number of persons. Its ingredients are the best grades of their kind, and its purity and wholesomeness. Modern methods of production are responsible for its being possible to offer margarine to the consumer at a price that is most moderate. It is a combination of value that has proved satisfactory to the taste of thousands of women—hence its wide sale. And it is marketed solely on its own merit. The immense increase in the use of margarine is witness to its wide popularity and to its merit as a spread and as a shortening. Last year the demand for margarine amounted to 209,000,000 pounds and this large quantity of the best GOOD LUCK Margarine, the largest selling brand, and the finest spread for bread, represented a large share. Such a record, made solely on the merit of the product, shows the advantage of doing business with branded merchandise, and is a crying refutation of any desire on the part of the margarine manufacturer to sell his product as a substitute. C. B. Lester, secretary Wisconsin Library Commission, called at the Gazette, while here Thursday for the better community conference and asked for 50 copies of the recently published leaflet on "The Plan and Purpose of the Gazette Community Service Department." The type of service you are rendering during the past year has been a valuable feature about the work the Gazette is doing in that you aren't undertaking to organize something new, but are making existing agencies mean more to the people of this section of the state. Our traveling library department is receiving more calls for service from Rock county and adjacent territory than ever before. We now have 42 traveling library stations in Rock county, whereas a year ago we had but 26. We are more than glad to cooperate with the Gazette community department in every possible way."

Constitutional Rights Involved in a Peculiar Suit.

One of the most interesting cases having to do with interstate relations, ever heard by the U. S. supreme court, will soon be argued at Washington. The state of Georgia owns a railroad from Chattanooga to Atlanta. It has been leased for years to another railroad. Inside the city limits is the railroad yard, the real estate and all personal rights being vested in the state of Georgia. Chattanooga wants to condemn streets through this property and in order to do so has taken the case to the supreme court of the United States since Georgia objects to the seizure of property for street purposes. Without these streets Chattanooga cannot expand. Into the scene steps another element of difficulty. Cincinnati, Ohio, as a municipality also owns a railroad—the Cincinnati Southern, leased to another road. The same action against the state of Georgia will, if supported, be taken against the Southern railroad, lessees of the Cincinnati road.

There are some fine constitutional points involved in the ownership of property in one state by another. Under article eleven of the constitution, a citizen of one state may not sue another state. The question of the right of a city of a state to sue another here arises. Tennessee holds that the supreme court has no jurisdiction; Georgia, asking an injunction, declares in its brief that a city has no power to bring condemnation proceedings against property owned by an outside state. Tennessee holds in answer that the state of Georgia stands in exactly the same position of a public service corporation, owned by non-residents. In the briefs there are indications that the whole question of the right of municipalities as well as states to sue another state will be argued.

We are interested in this in Wisconsin since we have gone to the supreme court in the matter of the diversion of lake water from the shores of this state by the city of Chicago. We also are interested in this suit since the boundary between Michigan and Wisconsin has about reached the stage of a suit to be filed by Michigan against Wisconsin for the recovery of lands in the north-eastern section along Montreal river.

The man with the guitar has no chance with the man playing an auto horn when it comes to serenading his Juliet.

Tammany's Virtuous Abnegation.

The self control of Tammany in not immediately accepting the gift of a million dollars or so of the fortune of Richard Croker, will at first blush seem like a great sacrifice. It also seems paradoxical that an organization like Tammany should have any scruples about any money no matter where it falls from, yet Tammany has so many devious ways of getting the cash necessary for both private fortunes and the use of the organization, that it now hesitates about taking a legacy gained from the operation of its own political machinery. Since the days of Boss Tweed there has been no Tammany Chief who has quit the job without a fortune. Even Honest John Kelly, thirty years ago, was a some time millionaire. Croker, when he rose from district leader to chairman of the Tammany finance committee, had a small bank roll gained from those days when he was a gang leader. There have been exposed time and again the serpentine ways of Tammany wealth. Vice and police are leading contributors. Merchants using the sidewalks in violation of ordinances was one of the old and certain forms of graft. Paying tribute to brush the ragged edges of the penitentiary and assessments on candidates for elective and appointive offices are among others true and old. So when Mrs. Croker wants to pay into the Tammany treasury the salvaged amount of the Croker fortune, she is only returning some of the cash which her late husband, by "able business methods" was enabled to amass without any visible means of support other than as a Tammany chief for many years. Money must be plentiful around Tammany in these days of a $375,000,000 budget for New York city, when a cool million can be turned down.

With Hollywood broke and out of business and reparations likely to be settled we shall have to turn to the old auto wreck for a headline.

The oldest paper in London ceased to print on Saturday. It was established in 1803 as the London Gazette and after the American Civil War was renamed the Pall Mall Gazette after a newspaper title in Thackeray's "Pendennis." For a time it was owned by William Waldorf Astor and became a functional newspaper catering largely to the aristocracy. It was never a large money maker and its discontinuance followed its sale a few days ago to a syndicate which already had an evening newspaper. Old age in newspapers sometimes means a better paper but frequently suggests that dry rot has set in.

Ethiopia has become a member of the League of Nations. We may expect that all war will forever be stopped from that hour.

A New Service From the Movies

Washington.—An interesting experiment is being made by a moving picture exhibitor in this city, and owners of moving picture theaters all over the country are closely watching the developments. The experiment is the result of a theory conceived by a local club woman, Mrs. H. H. Lecher.

Plans to improve the moving picture business from every possible angle are not uncommon, but it is unusual to find a film theorist who can sell her idea to a business man and induce him to create a position in his organization for her. The situation appears still more unusual when you consider that this theorist calmly proposed that the business man spend money on her plan without the prospect of any appreciable financial return.

The idea in question is that the owner of neighborhood moving picture theaters has a great opportunity for public service. His theaters stand empty at certain hours of the day when they might be offered to the public for meetings, lectures, and benefits. Films have so many uses now that the moving picture exhibitor with his equipment and centrally located theater is in a position to render valuable aid to his community. Lending the theaters to the public has been suggested before and occasionally tried out, but until now the theater owner, tired of paying a salary to some one who would put in a full day's work on the vague problem of rendering public service.

A year and a half ago Mrs. Lecher took her idea to Harry Crandall, owner of a chain of moving picture houses in Washington. She explained that it was not a publicity stunt nor a money-making proposition. The returns would be mostly in good will. The exhibitor was a public spirited man, and he had a strong desire to gain the cooperation of the public. He told her to go ahead with her plan in her own way.

One of the first duties that the public service department set itself was to establish a mailing list. When a very good picture is to be shown at one of the theaters in the chain, post cards are sent out telling briefly the strong points of the production. When the next picture to be shown is only of average merit, no cards are sent. The purpose of these cards is to point out the usually good features of the picture which the public should look for. If the producer has taken special care to make the film historically correct, for instance, the details are probably worth noting.

Audiences as a rule do not appreciate the less obvious good points about a picture. The average fan goes to the movies to be amused. Half an hour after he leaves the theater he has only a hazy idea of what the picture was all about. In consequence, good films are often money losers to the surprise and regret of the exhibitor. A few years ago it was not unusual to hear intelligent people say that moving pictures went too fast, and that they really could not follow the plot. Audiences have become accustomed to the screen way of telling stories, and the next step is for the public to see and appreciate the artistic and educational values of a picture, without, of course, losing the thread of the story. This is obviously necessary if moving pictures are to be more than a mere pastime.

Mrs. Lecher often has not progress is brought about by teaching the coming generation. Mrs. Lecher thought she saw a way to increase the power of observation in children and at the same time to render another kind of service to the community. Visual education by means of moving pictures had been tried out in various schools but not with great success. She tried out her idea with a group of girl athletes. Some moving pictures of gymnastic stunts were used. One reel was run off in a projection room, and the girls studied the motions. Then they discussed the picture, after which it was shown again. Later they tried out the stunt in the gymnasium. By compressing the subject into one reel of film which can be shown in 15 minutes, she found that the picture could be easily shown twice and commented upon in an hour, and there was no danger of eye strain.

Satisfied with her series of tests, she went to the superintendent of public schools in the District of Columbia, and offered Mrs. Crandall's theaters to the school system. It was pointed out that moving pictures can be a valuable means of education, but only if they are used under favorable conditions. A school does not often have first class equipment for showing pictures such as a theater can offer. The theater is sufficiently dark to make the pictures clear. The children are comfortably seated. A professional operator is in charge of the projection of the film. The theaters were offered without expense to the schools except that it would be necessary to detail a special teacher to take charge of the visual education classes.

It was explained that the pictures used would be government films, dealing with such subjects as coal mining, forest fires, outdoor winter life in the New England mountains. The only other films used would be from the foreign legations. These are similar to our own government films, and show the scenic features, industries, and sports of foreign nations.

The school system accepted the offer, and grammar grade classes of the public schools take turns in visiting the nearest theater of the chain on the mornings designated. According to the schedule now in effect all nine theaters in the chain are being used by the schools. On some days one theater is open, and on others two. The teacher in charge of the classes sends out an officer to the grade teachers explaining the subject of the next moving picture lesson, and requesting the children to look up certain information in advance. Facts learned from the picture are used in the class room as material for compositions, for language lessons, and in connection with history or geography courses.

A similar system is being tried in the Americanization schools of the city. A private projection room in one of the theaters has been used in the afternoon and at night by foreign students who are studying English and citizenship. As many of their lessons deal with American government, the government films are followed by these students with great interest.

The new public service department has never lacked work to do. Moving pictures of school activities have been made and given to the public schools as the beginning of a film library. The pictures of a spring track meet or cadet drill may thus prove inspiring to the students of the next year, or they may serve to show students that should be avoided. Government films have been shown before vacation Bible school classes, and several women's clubs are now planning to take a course in visual education, using the same subject matter. Neighborhood theaters have been offered to civic organizations.

A BABY'S LANGUAGE.
Well, I declare! You little laughing jester,
Checks as pink as roses and as full of sweetness, too,
Eyes as bright as star shine on a 'By pond that's classy.

Everything you look at is a wonder thing to you.
Hold your arms out to me and let merry laughter shake you,
And then one thing's very certain, your old Dad will come and take you.

Well, I declare! You're so small, yet domineering.
You can't walk or talk or tell the time, and yet you make it plain
By your cooing and your squealing that you'll stand no interfering.

With the wishes you're expressing, and the joys you reach to gain,
Men may stir their words together and read poetry it may be,
But the sweetest language spoken is the language of a baby.

Well, I declare! By your cooing and your laughter
And your five small teeth which glisten when you break into a smile,
You are very, very tiny, but you get what you want.

For you know your dad will weaken if you
worry him awhile,
So go and play the tyrant, have no fear that he'll forsake you—
When you hold your arms out that way, he will always come and take you.

FRANCISCO DE LA BARRA.

A new honor has just come to Mexico's most distinguished living diplomat—Francisco de la Barra. He has been invited to mediate between the governments of Greece and Bulgaria, and will sail to Europe shortly on this mission.

De la Barra is well known in the United States. He served for two years—1909-1911—as ambassador at Washington where he distinguished himself.

De la Barra was born in the City of Mexico on June 16, 1863, the son of a Chilean soldier who had fought gallantly for Mexico during the French intervention. De la Barra was educated in law at the College of the City of Mexico, and after serving in the Mexican congress, devoted himself to diplomacy. In 1901 and 1906 he was Mexican delegate to the Pan-
American congresses, and in 1907 represented her at The Hague.

In 1907 De la Barra was made minister to the South American republics along the Atlantic, and in 1908 to Holland and Belgium. He was at that post when he became ambassador to the U. S. On March 2, 1911, President Diaz called De la Barra home to take the portfolio of foreign affairs. Two months later Diaz resigned and De la Barra became minister, a post which he held until Madero's inauguration five months afterward.

A LAMP AND A LIGHT?

Personal Health Service

Noted Physician and Author

LIGHT VIBES GLARE

Glare, glitter, flash, shine, sparkle, dazzle. It fatigues the eyes. It gives you a headache. It razzles your temper. It may attract you along with moths to the flame, but does it put you in the mood to sign on the dotted line? Most of us are never even this skinned indeed. Then why do they do it?

Every one knows how restful and pleasing are the soft tones or shades of brown, green, gray, of blue, the natural tints of the woods and fields and sky and water, the flat or dull finish which nature puts on even the most brilliant displays of autumn foliage. Yet in most artificial lightings the object seems to be glare, glitter, flash, sparkle and dazzle. Decorating and finishing usually contribute toward this object. Surfaces are given a highly polished or shiny finish; shiny varnish, glittering plate glass, flashing nickelplate and hard brilliant colors everywhere insult the eye.

A reader inquired whether the bright light of a gasoline lamp is injurious to the eyes. Such light is no more or less injurious than the same amount of light from any other kind of source. In some cases it may be that a yellowish light, such as that from a kerosene lamp, is more comfortable to read or work under, but if so, the gasoline lamp may be provided with a globe or shade which will give the desired softening.

Try reading with direct sunlight on the page, and you will soon know that an excessive amount of light is not good for the eyes. The amount of light must be determined by individual preference and the nature of the work. For reading the light in relation to the page and the reader's eyes. The light should fall upon the page from above the level of the reader's eyes and from a point behind the field of vision. That is, the source of light itself should be invisible to the reader when the head is in a reading position. This applies to all kinds of light, whether natural or artificial. If the lamp itself is within the field of vision as the worker sits or stands at work, obviously the eyes are subjected to the strain of looking at the source of light. A light or dim light is less injurious than a bright light.

Open or frosted globes or shades are always preferable to clear glass globes. The latter are very irritating to the eyes, because they diffuse and scatter the light and prevent the glare from the naked flame or incandescent filament. The popular fancy that clear globes are better is a misconception. The foundation is no better than

Q. I have a question about the Bureau of Census. I want to know how to get the full name and address. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.

Q. Did Christopher Columbus receive any money for his discovery of America? U. S. S.

A. The sum he received amounted to about $320.

Q. Are many negroes leaving the south for northern states? R. D. T.

A. According to a study made by the department of labor, 478,700 negroes left the south for northern states in the year ending Sept. 1. The largest migrations were as follows: Georgia, 126,000; Alabama, 90,000; Florida, 29,000; Mississippi, 22,000.

Q. How do Irish Free State and Great Britain differ? K. P.

A. The flag of the Free State is composed of three stripes which are green, white and orange, the green stripe being next to the staff.

Q. Is Katrina Van Tassel, the heroine of the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," buried at Sleepy Hollow? S. G.

A. This is the question of the Sleepy Hollow cemetery inscribed with the name of Katrina Van Tassel, but as she lived later than the time of the story, it is obvious that this is not true. Many Sleepy Hollowers have chipped the stone, however, in the belief that they were obtaining souvenirs, associated with Washington Irving.

Q. Is there such a thing as a blind tulip? L. V. M.

A. The department of agriculture says that a blind tulip is one which has reached flowering size and does not flower. Blindness in commercial bulbs may be due to various causes, such as too high temperature at the time of planting, or to a virus. This sometimes occurs when the plants are forced. Almost without exception, a tulip bulb of proper size and ordinary firmness has a flower in it, and if properly handled will produce that flower.

Q. What countries used the double-headed eagle as a government emblem before the war? S. H.

A. Russia, Austria and Germany used this emblem.

If You Hunt At All

You must know the game laws. Whether you hunt rabbits, birds or game, you must know the laws when and where they may be shot or trapped, and how big a bag you may carry.

To keep out of trouble you must know the legal provisions in every state covering licenses, seasons, possession, sale and export of game.

All of these points are covered in a new 72-page booklet just issued by the Department of Agriculture. Every sportsman should have a copy of this booklet so that he may keep within the law.

This is a free Government publication and our Washington Information Bureau will secure a copy for any reader who fills out and mails the coupon below. Enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. Write your name and address clearly.

You see from declining to connect Edgar with this crime, I had come to the point of not only admitting the possibility of his guilt, but of arguing for and against it in my own mind. I had almost rather have died than do this, but the word having once passed between me and Mr. Jackson, every instinct within me clamored for a confirmation of my doubts or a confirmation of it. I was strong that my duty would be plain and the future of Orpha settled as her father would have it.

To repeat them to understand this crime and to hear the guilty hand which dropped poison into the sick man's soothing mixture. It was necessary to discover what had happened somewhere in the house between the hours I have mentioned, of sufficient moment to account for Edgar's attitude and that of the faithful Wealthy.

But one conjecture suggested itself after hours of thought. Was it not possible that while I was below, Edgar in his room, and Wealthy in Orpha's room, had been together, and for the second time into his wife's presence, persuaded him to reveal his decision and even gone so far as to startle him with the will to leave to his own hope?

Thus fortified, but still fearful of further vacillation on the part of one whose mind, on the strong suspicion to which this way or that with every inference brought to bear upon it, what more natural than, given a criminal's heart, he should think of the case and only way of ending this discussion and making himself safe from this very hour.

A glass of water—a drop of medicine from the bottle—was all that was needed to bring about a quick good-night—and a hasty departure.

I made the hall safe on my feet, and to consider the matter in connection with a man like Edgar. But my thoughts, once allowed to enter this groove, would run on.

The door would not run to regain the room. That room is not a room, but to cross the hall, a few steps and he is at the stair-head—has passed it, when a noise from below started him, and he is coming down the stairs.

Edgar's ready to tell my story when I found that he was not alone. He was by the fact that death had followed his visit, death which in this case meant murder.

It was base beyond belief; hardly to be thought of, but did it not explain every fact?

I would see.

First, it accounted for the empty room and the disappearance of the will which it had held. Also for the fact that this will could not be found in any place accessible to a man too feeble to leave his room.

It had been given to Edgar, and he had carried it away.

Had they searched his room for it? They had searched me. Had they been fair enough to search his room and to search him?

Secondly, Edgar's restlessness on that fatal night. The watch he kept on Wealthy's door. The interest he had shown at seeing me to her—possibly his reluctance to her—possibly his absolute assertion which would link me to a crime which he, above all others, knew that I had not committed.

Thirdly, the comparative calmness with which he saw his uncle, still undecided, or what was fully as probable, confused in mind by his sufferings and the near approach of death, order the destruction of the remaining will, to preserve which and make it operative he had risked the remorse of a lifetime. He knew that with both wills gone, the third and original one which at that time he believed to be still in existence would secure for him even more than the one he saw being consumed before his eyes, viz., the undisturbed possession of the Bartholomew estate.

So much for the time preceding the discovery that crime and not the hazard of disease had caused our uncle's sudden death. How about

Hair Beauty

Ever wavy, ever glossy—as is mine

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Many women, I am told, use curling fluids which are very crude. And they use greasy, oily applications to give the hair gloss. I want those women to use what I use—the best that science knows. So I have asked some famous chemists to prepare my Hair Dress. Now all druggists and toilet counters can supply you with it.

I am not a cosmetic maker. My work is on the stage and screen, and I was induced to offer women the aids which gave me beauty and which have kept my youth. Now these women—thousands of them—now how I love my hair so ever curly, ever glossy. And they have urged me to supply them the method that I use.

That method is my Hair Dress. I apply it on a tooth brush or a comb. For an instant wave I fluff Edgar's conduct since? Was there anything in that to dispute this theory?

Not absolutely. Emotions under circumstances so tragic, would be expected from him, and with his quick mind and knowledge of the worst of Edgar's character, he must have had little fear of any unfortunate results to himself of the most lively recognition of where the blame would fall if he acted his part with the skill of which he was the undoubted master.

Was it in accordance with my theory or the reverse, for him, immediately and before the doctor could appear, to rush upstairs in company with Orpha and Nurse Wealthy to inspect the cabinet where the medicines were kept?

...and are hungry for better educational opportunities, better church facilities and more good times. If they carouse around half the night it's because you haven't provided them with anything better."

Rev. C. L. Atkins, Edgerton, led the discussion following the forenoon ad-crosses. He said that he had seen some of the laws that Mr. Wilcox advocated administered successfully in California, offering the conditions in the city as compared to those in the city. Rev. Mr. Adkins said:

"I have been in dance halls on the Barbary coast in San Francisco, and at barn dances in Rock county, and one was just about as bad as the other. I think that the city needs a need for providing better recreational opportunities for young people in the country."

MAXFIELD TELLS OF TRIP TO COAST

Big Truck Makes 26-Day Trip With One Puncture and No Mishaps.

Alch Maxfield and party who left Janesville Sept. 16, with an especially equipped motor truck for California have reached their destination. Mr. Maxfield, in a letter just received, says on account of their trip and especially that part after they left Denver, Colo., through the mountains and across the desert. "We left Denver on Thursday," Mr. Maxfield writes, "arrived at Los Angeles on Friday, just two weeks and one day from the time we left Janesville. We stayed in Santa Fe for two days. The rain had washed so many bridges out that the roads were both good and bad. You know nothing about rains in the east. From Colorado Springs to Flagstaff, Ariz., about 800 miles, nearly one-half of the bridges were washed out. We had to detour over some terrible roads but got through all right. We got a good truck or had any car trouble, except just once when we ran a nail into one of the tires and caused a down the just outside of Omaha.

Strike Bad Stretches
"From Denver there were three exceptionally bad stretches of road. A detour of about 10 miles just before we got to Santa Fe, which ran through woods and gullies. The others were 40 mile stretches. One of these had more stones on it than I thought there were in the whole U. S. It was all up hill which made it harder to drive, but our tires stood up all right.
"At Meeker there were about 200 cars a day going through and lots of people without means. We passed a number of cars broken down. We passed one Janesville family whose father had gone back 40 miles for repairs. Any number of tire trouble and blow outs. So many people start out with old cars in poor shape. Any one making the trip needs a good car and new tires. I won't the mountains there had a hard time starting their cars in the morning on account of the cold and high altitude, but we never had any trouble.

"I found some wonderful stretches of road even in the desert. The desert starts at Needles, Calif. There are small settlements about every 40 miles. At Needles they told me it did not rain for 14 months and then it rained so hard that there was a foot of water on the streets and the railroad did not run a train for a week. We had ice and ice water all the way across the desert. Our truck did not take much water, but some cars had to buy water, because they boiled so often.

Big Truck Is Curiosity
"After we left Denver we attracted a lot of attention, because they had never seen us here a truck before. Also we were quite a curiosity most of the way through Iowa and Nebraska, on account of our large truck.
"We crossed four mountain passes. When we got to Santa Fe they commenced telling us about the La Borda hill, which has 18 hair-pin curves. They said we could not make the curves. It is a high table-land from the Santa Fe side where you drop down several hundred feet in a mile and a half. We made it all right but had to back up on three or four turns.

"We never had an accident or mishap of any kind. We got to Los Angeles, Calif., Thursday night. We were only 62 miles from Los Angeles then and the roads were all paved from Victorville to Los Angeles, a little over 100 miles. When you leave San Bernardino you begin to get into the orange district—orange, grape and walnut groves. There are several cities of 10,000 population. In between these two, in fact it is built up most of the way but the land looks like a gravel bed—really a continuation of the desert.

of course it is irrigated. There are old lava beds and signs of old volcanic eruptions all of the way through Arizona and New Mexico. That country must surely have been alive at some time.

Traveled 20 Days.
"Los Angeles is a beautiful city. They do not build the houses very high, mostly one story, so you see a big city built spread over a large area.

"We did not travel as fast as some people but we were always warm and comfortable and never got wet. Half of the tourists nearly froze. Some of us were sick and taking all in all we were very fortunate on our trip.
"We left Janesville on the 16th of September and arrived here Oct. 9. We stayed at Omaha, three days; at Columbus, Neb., one day; at Meeker, Neb., seven days; at Denver, three days; and at Santa Fe for two days. We traveled 26 days and the most we made in one day was 162 miles and the least about 70. Some days we did not travel over five hours."

Chiropractors Can't Conduct Eugenics Exams

State laws requiring eugenics examinations as a prerequisite to obtaining a marriage license do not authorize chiropractors to make such examinations, District Attorney S. G. Danwidde, Janesville, was advised in a recent opinion by the attorney general's department.
The ruling declared that osteopaths can make such examinations but that chiropractors cannot.
In holding thus, the opinion declared that the state law requiring such examinations by physicians does not include chiropractors under the title of physician.

MAGNOLIA GOT A NAME FROM THE TREE WHICH FAILED TO GROW THERE

The question of why Magnolia town is named as it is has been answered. A school boy asked the question of a man in Janesville. A few days ago he was an old resident of Magnolia but could not answer. He, in turn, asked the Gazette and there is nothing in any of the records to tell the story. So the Gazette posed it along and Frank K. Jones, attorney of Evansville, has answered the question, and here it is:

I noticed your article a few nights ago asking "Who Named the Town of Magnolia?" and wondering if anyone could answer this question. I well remember of hearing my father tell hundreds of times how Magnolia was named and am pleased to give you the information.

My father's name was Chester Jones. He came to Wisconsin in the fall of 1839 or 1840 and lived with Henry Jones, who was his cousin, at the Janes Tavern in Janesville, during that fall and winter. He well remembered the early history of Janesville.

From his description of that winter I have always supposed until recently that the Janes Tavern was on the site of the Myers House as my father used to tell us that at that time there were but two buildings in Janesville. The one was the store run by Tommy Lippin, as he would call him, which store was on the bank of the river at the east end of the bridge and on the south side of the street. The other building was the Janes Tavern which was just across the road and east of the Lippin store. However, the road which he referred to was probably not what is now Main street but a road nearer the river, making the Tavern about where the Hayes block now stands.

The next spring my father's parents, four brothers and three sisters came on from western New York and they all settled on land in what are now the townships of Union and Magnolia.

At about the same time a man by name of Joseph Prentice came from some of the southern states. I do not remember which state, and I do not know for a number of years of Magnolia trees. With the hot conducted the first store in Magnolia. He had brought with him a supply of the seed of the Magnolia tree. He planted the seed with the idea that he could develop a grove of Magnolia trees. With the hot conditions were against him and his scheme was not a success. The novelty of the young trees caused some attention, as no one there had ever seen a magnolia tree, and his store being located at the crossing of two roads soon became known as Magnolia corners. Soon afterward, when the townships were named, the logical thing was to name the township after his metropolis and the township was named East Milwaukee street on the North side of the street and a short distance east of where Milton avenue crosses off of Milwaukee street.

Joseph Prentice conducted his store for a time but died while yet a young man leaving his widow and two children. Fred Prentice and Alvin Prentice are members of the firm of Mrs. Prentice afterward moved to Janesville and Everson, druggists, who Janesville and married a man by the name of Hutchinson. They lived on of Milwaukee street about opposite

KELLOGG CHOICE STIRS INSURGENTS

Naming of Administration Man Fans Fires in Republican Party.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923, by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington—Political warfare between the regular wing of the republican party and the insurgents in the west and northwest has been to the small degree intensified by the selection of former U. S. Senator Frank B. Kellogg to be the American ambassador to Great Britain.

The president and Secretary Hughes asked the British government to

Trouble With Insurgents

This does not mean any fight of consequence against the confirmation of Mr. Kellogg, who stands in high esteem in the senate and who probably will be confirmed quickly when his nomination is reported to the floor of the senate. But it does portend trouble of another character. In other words the insurgents are asking whether the appointment of Mr. Kellogg means that the administration intends to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Harding and other rebellious states, politically speaking, to award its patronage spoils to the so-called conservative branch of the party.

About the middle of the administration, the late Charles D. Norton, who was private secretary to Mr. Taft, committed the indiscretion of writing a letter, which was published, to the effect that unless the insurgents played ball with the administration they could expect no patronage. Nobody has written any such letter today, nor has any final word been communicated to the factions in the various states concerned, but it is known that the Kellogg appointment has precipitated a merry little controversy and that parallel with it is another row in Wisconsin which the political mentors of President Coolidge are trying to settle.

Former-Labor Party Unrecognized
Minnesota has in the last two senatorial elections thrown her influence to the farmer-labor party. The republicans have lost many of their regular supporters in the melee. The democratic party has been almost entirely wiped out. Who, then, should get recognition? The regular party workers will not be encouraged to keep up the fight if the administration is to bestow its rewards on the insurgent radicals. As for delegates to the nominating convention, the president probably will not get the support of the farmer-labor party anyhow and the question of what he gets from Minnesota will depend on what faction of the republican party possesses the machinery for choosing delegates.

Struggle in Wisconsin
In Wisconsin an interesting situation has developed as a result of the complaint of some of the followers of Senator La Follette that the administration was "friendly" with the La Follette wing of the republican party. Here the problem is somewhat different for in addition to Senator La Follette, who won the regular republican party nomination and election, there are several members of the house of representatives who are classed as republicans. In this group there are two kinds, however—those who are friendly to La Follette but are also on good terms with the national administration and those who are most of the time denouncing the administration with loud-voiced and direct epithets. There are questions arising all the time with reference to the appointment of postmasters and other federal officials, and the administration will have to choose between the factions.

Harding Promised Kellogg
As for Mr. Kellogg's appointment, the friends of the White House are letting it be known that President Coolidge was committed to the appointment of Mr. Kellogg by the promise of the late President Harding. This does not mean that Mr. Coolidge thinks anything less of former Senator Kellogg than did Mr. Harding but that were the political tides to turn he would not be able to avoid entering into a controversy with the two Minnesota senators, one of whom boasts of the fact that he was elected to office by the overwhelming vote of the people against Mr. Kellogg. Outside of the radical wing of the party the Kellogg appointment is looked upon as bringing to the court of public opinion an exceptionally able lawyer, a man of means who will not suffer the financial handicaps of his predecessor, and a man who has the confidence of the co-operative element in the republican party which believes in a closer understanding with Europe instead of a policy of aloofness and isolation.

RANGE STOCK MEN MARKET MANY COWS

Washington—Exports of the department of agriculture are puzzled over the tendency of range stock men to market a larger proportion of cows and heifers than usual, as disclosed by a recent survey.

Opinions regarding both the basis and the significance of the movement differ widely, according to an announcement today.

"There seems to be little doubt," the statement said, "that at least a part of the increased marketing of females represents forced liquidation. In other instances it is a voluntary movement in discouragement of calf-feeding because of inability to continue in the cattle business at prevailing market prices."

RAISER OF MONEY ORDERS ARRESTED

San Francisco—John Sacramento is being held here today by postal inspectors, who declare he is wanted in Tacoma, Portland, Seattle, New York, Baltimore and St. Louis on charges of having passed postal orders raised from $1 to $100. When taken into custody he was purchasing two $1 money orders.

Janesville, Wis.

Gentlemen:

We believe you will be pleased to learn of the excellent results we have obtained from our advertising campaign in your paper during the past few months and particularly the tremendous response to our latest announcement of a reduction in rates.

Monday evening, October 29, an advertisement appeared in your paper announcing our new rates. The response was not only tremendous, but immediate. Shortly after the publication of the Gazette that evening our business began to show a marked increase and using a checking system we were able to trace an enormous amount of new patronage directly to the advertisement carried in your paper. This rapid growth has continued and made necessary the addition of more cabs.

We believe that our steady growth in patronage results, to a large extent, from our consistent advertising campaign carried in your paper together with the efforts of our organization to give the residents of this city the best of service. This increased business has enabled us to lower our rates for service.

We feel that considerable credit is due your organization for the preparation of this campaign and the results obtained therefrom and wish to assure you of our appreciation of the co-operation we have received from you in making this campaign a decided success. You may count on us for a continuation of our consistent advertising.

Very cordially yours,
CHECKER CAB COMPANY.

The Heavens in November

By DR. C. S. BRAININ of the Columbia University Observatory Staff.

Since the moon revolves about the earth on an orbit whose distance from us is only about 238,900 miles, it is by far the nearest of all the celestial bodies. In its periodic revolution it is seen as a disk, complete at the full phase and partially so at other phases, whose diameter is approximately half a degree.

The entire sky is pretty well studded with stars of various magnitudes, and as these are ever so much farther from the earth than the moon, the latter will be continuously obscuring our view of some of these by the interception of its bulk. This is a form of eclipse of minor character, in theory similar to eclipses of the sun, and are known as occultations.

Most of the stars which are within the reach of the moon's path are too small to be observed by the unaided eye, but there is a fair number of them of the seventh magnitude suffering such occultation each month. To the amateur, of course, only occultations of the brighter stars and the occasional occultation of a planet are of great interest.

This month presents to us an opportunity of observing such an eclipse of a first-magnitude star and also one of the dim and remote planets, Uranus. That of the planet will come first, on the 10th, at 11:00 p. m. Eastern standard time, as viewed from Washington, D. C. In other localities the time will vary somewhat, and the proper allowance must be made for other time belts.

Uranus is very difficult to observe because its stellar magnitude is only about the sixth at this time, but it can be observed under good atmospheric conditions. In fact, this is a very good time for those who wish just to get a glimpse of this planet, because the fact of the occultation will serve as a means of identification. Use an opera glass or field glass if you have no telescope. About an hour will be the duration of the occultation.

On the other hand, the occultation of the first-magnitude star Aldebaran, the brightest in the constellation of Taurus the Bull, will be easy enough to observe. It will take place on the night of the 23-24th, at about two minutes to 1 in the morning, seen from Washington, and will last a few minutes more than an hour.

The disappearance of the star at lude star in Orion, and the Sword belt of the Hunter are just over the horizon at this time in the early days of the month, but it will not be long before they, too, are in good position for our observation. Tumbling behind in Sath, Betelgeuse, Bellatrix, Rigel and Saiph mark the corners of a great quadrilateral, the center of which is occupied by the belt. It is a particularly easy configuration to fix in one's memory.

Note also that, with the exception of Betelgeuse, all the brighter Orion stars are blue-white in color. This signifies a very high degree of temperature, probably around 20,000 degrees Centigrade. They are also called helium stars because the lines of that interesting gaseous element are most prominent in the spectrum of their light. The character of their light is very different from that of the sun, for our own star sends out a yellowish-white light which is like that of candle in the constellation of Auriga, lying between Orion and the North Pole.

COURT REOPENS SAILSTAD MYSTERY

Insurance Company Puts Case
Before U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance on the night of August 25, 1920, of Edward J. Sailstad, Eau Claire, Wis., business man, was revived again here today when arguments were submitted to the United States circuit court of appeals in an appeal by the New York Life Insurance company from a jury decision in the United States district court for the western district of Wisconsin.

The lower court decision opened to the former wife of Sailstad insurance money to the extent of $82,500. On the ground that errors in procedure nullified the determination of the district court, the case was carried to the higher tribunal. A reversal of the lower court determination is asked by the appellants.

Turned, Widow's Claim
Attorneys for the former Mrs. Sailstad, now Mrs. Lorne E. Richardson, beneficiary of the insurance, contended that her husband fell a victim to the fire that destroyed his cottage and the charred remains found in the ruins of the building were those of Sailstad.

The insurance company took the position that instead of having burned to death in the cottage, the man had carried a cadaver from a nearby cemetery which he placed in the cottage. Then, they claimed, he deliberately set fire to the building to nullify the possible recovery by causing them to believe that he perished in the flames, and eloped with Miss Dorothy Anderson, his stenographer.

Disappeared, Is Claim
The attorneys for the appellant asserted that there was no room for an inference that Sailstad had perished in the fire. Instead, they said, he did just what he intended to do—disappear with Dorothy Anderson. University of Wisconsin pathologists at the time of the trial in the United States district court charged a man from the burned remains found in the fire which they found to resemble in some characteristics the vanished man.

Hingham, England, Sends Gift to Hingham, Mass.

Hingham, Mass.—Wood from an oak tree planted by Queen Elizabeth went into the making of three chairs which have been shipped to Hingham, Norfolk, England, to this town. They are the gift of Harry C. Toffe, a builder in the English Hingham, to the Day State township which was founded by men from the Norfolk town in the seventeenth century.

ESPERANTO SONGS* INCLUDE VERSIONS OF YANKEE DOODLE

Leipzig.—Yankee Doodle in Esperanto is one of the gems of the Esperanto song book which Esperanto publishers recently issued in this city and hope to sell to all the five million Esperantists throughout the world.

The first stanza of the song, as done into the world language, reads: "Ne-gra-sa es-las Yankee-knab'klaf el-o fa-vo-rat, hel 'Ce-dun-ro, lu-do, sport'raj bal' son-vin-la klaf rat, hel 'Yankee, gar-du co mar-beat! Yankee Doodle Dandy! Blidu pri mi-na-ca vort! Yankee Doodle Dandy."

The publishers guarantee the above to be a highly artistic Esperantist translation of these words so familiar to all Americans: "A Yankee boy is trim and tall, "And never over fat, Sir; "At dance and frolic, hop and heel "As nimble as a rat, Sir. "Yankee Doodle, guard your coast, "Yankee Doodle Dandy, "Fear not then, nor threat nor boast, "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

MRS. CROKER SAYS ESTATE WAS RAIDED

Concerted Attack on Both Sides of Atlantic Told by Widow.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
New York—Asserting that a concerted attack was being made upon her on both sides of the Atlantic, Mrs. Julia Edmondson Croker, widow of the late Tammany leader, declared last night that Glenelg, her Irish estate, had been raided and searched for papers a day or two before the filing of another suit involving Croker's will at West Palm Beach, Fla., last Monday.

After successfully defending suits brought by the Croker children to contest the will of her husband, Mrs. Croker said she had been notified of an action brought by Joseph Menget, mayor of West Palm Beach, and W. E. Mingers, treasurer of the local Young Men's Christian Association, to compel the opening of a safe deposit box in a local bank, alleged to contain Croker's last will.

Mrs. Croker declared that no will could be found in the safety deposit box in the First National Bank of West Palm Beach. Its contents, she said, consisted only of civic bonds valued at about $110,000, and two deeds to Florida property in her name.

BIG JUMP IN TAX ON CORPORATIONS

Rock County Corporations to Pay $170,000 More Than Last Year.

Rock county corporations' income tax assessments for 1933 total $252,667, compared with only $82,561 last year, or nearly four times larger, according to assessment returns completed and announced Friday by the state tax commission.

In the entire state, the increase of corporation income tax assessments is nearly $3,000,000. In 1932 it is $6,695,721, compared to $3,716,691 last year. The corporation assessments were certified to county clerks for collection.

Excesses Nearly $2,000,000.
In addition to the normal corporation tax, the commission also announced the soldiers' educational bonus surtax to be $786,050.18, and teachers' retirement surtax of $1,241,518.56. There also is a soldiers' bonus tax of $16,287.95, assessed on back incomes for 1918 and that was discovered in the 1933 audit, making the total corporation income taxes of all kinds on the current rolls the sum of $8,655,580.66.

Although the corporation income tax for 1933 is nearly double the 1932 assessment, the amount of back taxes is much smaller, it is pointed out by the commission. The total tax for this year is somewhat less than for the war years—1917 to 1920, but far in excess of the taxes of the pre-war period.

$700,000 Back Taxes.
The total amount of back taxes discovered by field audits during the year, including the additional 10 percent interest prescribed by the 1923 legislature, is about $700,000, commission officials state. The assessment of income of individuals and fiduciaries made by local assessors, has not been completed but reports from these officials indicate that the assessment will be somewhat less than in 1932, it is said.

LARGE MAJORITY OF WINTER FIRES EASILY AVERTED

The majority of winter fires, taking a large toll of lives and property in Wisconsin each year, can be avoided if proper precautions are followed by all householders, according to a warning just issued by the industrial commission.

Here are some of the commission's safety rules:

Don't neglect the metal stove board or zinc on the floor in front of the stove ashpit. See that it extends one foot in front of the ashpit.

If the stove is less than two feet from wood or plaster partition it should be protected by metal or asbestos.

Don't leave kindling in the stove over night or hang clothes too near the stove or smoke pipe. Smoke pipes must be well joined together, and free from rust holes and open seams.

Four inches of masonry should surround smoke pipes passing through walls, partitions, floors and roofs.

Smoke pipes in attics, closets and other concealed places are dangerous, as fluff and spiderwebs gather and may become ignited.

Chimneys should be cleaned out frequently, and no woodwork should be embedded in their walls.

Furnaces and boilers must be placed in brick or concrete floors. Woodwork within two feet must be protected with asbestos.

Beware of overheating stoves, boilers and furnaces.

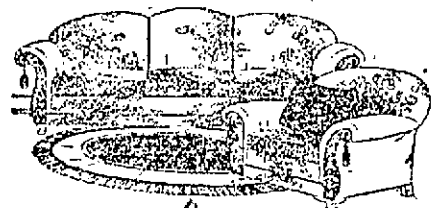

Don't put ashes in cardboard or wooden containers.
